Hi, how can i install this setup into my pc and what version of gym master lite is this?. ok? Tumor progression is driven by stromal cells called fibroblasts. In mammary fibroblasts, epithelial growth factor receptor (EGFR) signaling is linked to the production of extracellular matrix proteins, including fibronectin and collagen, through the activation of the transcription factor STAT3, a proto-oncogene commonly deregulated in human cancer. EGFR tyrosine kinase inhibitors, though clinically active in many cancers, are only effective in a subset of patients, perhaps in part because of compromised EGFR expression in the heterogeneous cell populations that comprise cancer. Therefore, therapies inhibiting STAT3 are of interest for their potential to synergize with anti-EGFR therapies. However, the stromal mechanisms that drive resistance to EGFR inhibition remain to be elucidated. In the current proposal, we hypothesize that mammary fibroblasts are major contributors to tumor progression following inhibition of EGFR tyrosine kinases, and that the epithelial-stromal communication is dependent on the production of fibronectin and the activation of STAT3. Further, we hypothesize that inhibiting fibronectin synthesis and/or STAT3 activity will synergize with an EGFR inhibitor that primarily inhibits epithelial cell proliferation, such as an anti-EGFR mAb or EGFR tyrosine kinase inhibitor.
